My mirrors and secrets

These empty black drawers. Empty. Are we they really?

Like a magician, life is an illusion. We always misrecall something different than what we see. They fill up with experiences.

This cabinet is constructed of thousands of mirrors as a possible image of one's life being made of secrets and reflections from others' beings.

One of these beings is Tim Ess, who has placed trust in me since my work for years.

Tim by Tim Project #1

This work is a response to Tim Ess's invitation. I love this concept because the frames allows plenty of freedom to create – after all, art is freedom.

My work turned out to take shape as a three-dimensional piece. Within such compartments there are objects or 3-D elements taken from my own worldly art installations, which I have been collecting since 2006.

It has been an enjoyable process to recollect my memories about all the work, the frames, and the special moments that came along with them.

The theme of the by Tim is how theoretically mankind has taken over the earth – disastrous for humans and for other living things in the natural world.

Tim by Tim was not only fun, but also a kind creative. It has certainly organized my awareness as an artist to encounter art as freedom.
